This trope does not refer to the condition in the song by R.E.M. that is the Trope Namer for this trope where the singer sings, "It's the end of the world as we know it, and I feel fine." Rather, it's the opposite. This is what will happen if the heroes don't stop the Evil Plan from doing its nasty work. It can be either supernatural or superscience, depending on the villain, but in ...

Due to the limited budget, the American cast members and crew (including George Lucas) all had to fly coach class to England, rather than first class. When Carrie Fisher's mother, Debbie Reynolds, heard about this, she called Lucas, complaining about how insulting it was for her daughter to be flying coach. Fisher was in the room with Lucas when he took the call, and after a few minutes ...
