I have had all the NF scopes including the 2013 and 2014 spec Competition scopes as well as two March scopes, the 10X60X52. The choice would depend on what shooting you do and what constraints/rules you have to work with. Weight is the biggest advantage of the March scopes versus the NF Comp which has comparable glass.

For optical clarity, the March is the best glass I've ever used. I also like the 52mm objective of the March better than the NF's 56. To properly evaluate one scope against another, a cursory look see is not enough. The eye piece must be adjusted for your eyes on each scope and used (that means shooting) in a variety of weather conditions.
