Guillermo Kuitca: Diarios is the first US museum exhibition of a selection of paintings made from 2005 to the present. Since 1994, Kuitca has taken failed and discarded canvases, stretched them over an abandoned table from his parents' garden, and then spent periods of time ranging from three to six months creating intentional and accidental doodles, drawings, and recordings on their surfaces.

Abstract Class in Java - Javatpoint
Further to the answer from @Will (which is correct), you could structure your heirarchy a little better. For example, you do something different with each of the media types, but each type still gets consumed.. So change your base class to have an abstract base method called Consume(), which is then overridden and actually implemented in each derived class, this way you can pass around ...
