Single stage paint is a type of all-in-one paint solution that includes basecoat and clearcoat in one formula. This type of paint formula was most popular in the 1980s before newer technologies began to emerge. Two-stage or dual stage paint, on the other hand, is a type of auto paint that is applied in two phases. The first phase, the basecoat, is applied after the primer, while the clearcoat is applied after the basecoat dries.
