MAPS OF THE ESTATE | Barbican Living
The City of London has half a million people pass it through every day, but only around 9000 residents. Of these, roughly half live in the 2000 Barbican flats , with landscaped gardens, the lake, a school and a church right on your doorstep – plus one of the most prestigious arts centres in the world, of course.

Barbican Estate | modern architecture london
The Barbican Estate was not built as a social housing project, but rather as a solution to repopulating the City of London after the war. The common misconception may originate from the fact that the architects had gained recognition earlier in 1951 for designing the nearby Golden Lane Estate, a major council housing project on the northern edge of the city.
