In Basque mythology there exists a creature known as the Basajaun. Translated, it means "Lord of the Woods". Basajaun is described as a robust, large, and hairy hominid who lives in the forests. He also has a female counterpart and companion known as a Basandere. Now, here is where the Basque myth becomes very interesting.

Basque Legends

The mythology of the ancient Basques largely did not survive the arrival of Christianity in the Basque Country between the 4th and 12th century AD. Most of what is known about elements of this original belief system is based on the analysis of legends, the study of place names and scant historical references to pagan rituals practised by the Basques. One main figure of this belief system was the female goddess Mari. According to legends collected in the area of Altaun, the other main figure was h

Lurra (the Earth) or Ama lurra (the Mother earth) is main goddess in the legends of the Basque Country. She is the shelter and dwelling for all creatures; the Creator of the whole Nature. She guarantees life to the plants and animals and she gives humans the necessary food and dwelling. The Earth is a giant hull, an infinite hull, where the souls of the dead and most of the Sun and The Moon are Ama Lurra's daughters.
