Eurocentrism as a System of Knowledge. Eurocentrism is not a geographical question, but an epistemic one. As such, just to bring the history of colonialism and 'non-Western' states into IR, though a worthy effort, is insufficient (Amin 1989, Araújo and Maeso 2015).

Beyond Eurocentrism and Anarchy: Memories of International ...

While IR's Eurocentric limits are usually acknowledged, what those limits mean for theorizing about the international is seldom clarified. In The Global Transformation, Buzan and Lawson offer a 'composite approach' that goes some way towards addressing IR's Eurocentrism, challenging existing myths about the emergence and evolution of the international system and society.
