To me a cozy mystery is not necessarily cute amateur sleuths and cupcakes, but more atmosphere and character than violence. These stories takes place within the British Isles. Nothing exceptionally gory or violent, but with great atmosphere, dialogue, and characters; mysteries that fly off the pages

The Golden Age proper is in practice usually taken to refer to a type of fiction which was predominant in the 1920s and 1930s but had been written since at least 1911 and is still being written—though much less—today.

the British Countryside
is such a peaceful, bucolic place. Who on earth would want to kill anyone there? Yet
we've been doing it for years. From Wuthering Heights onward, the landscape has become one of the biggest,
baddest characters in British fiction, and crime fiction especially.
