The old myth is that The Catholic Church

File Type PDF Church And University In The Scottish Enlightenment The Moderate

stifled learning in the supposedly "dark" Middle Ages. But the fact is that the Catholic Church actually created the university system during the Medieval Era. The university system developed around "Cathedral Schools," which were created to teach theology and canon law to the local clergy.

In this atmosphere, the Church provided special protection to university students by offering them what was known as benefit of clergy. Clergymen in medieval Europe enjoyed a special legal status in that, first, it was an extraordinarily serious crime to lay a hand on them, and second, they had the right to have their cases heard in an ...
