Dear Mackenzie, The advice I always give dancers about summer programs is that you can improve anywhere with the right mind-set. So no, you don't have to attend a big, expensive intensive. Sure, they're great places to be seen and good "names" to have on your resumé, but they're not prerequisites for a professional career.

Dear Jenny, It's the classic struggle, right? Inevitably, you end up lopsided after performing the same choreography over and over during Nutcracker runs—and yes, it's definitely hard to focus on training when you're constantly in the theater.. My first piece of advice is to make sure you're still taking a full class, every day.
