Dissemination Jacques Derrida

"The English version of Dissemination [is] an able translation by Barbara Johnson . . . Derrida's central contention is that language is haunted by dispersal, absence, loss, the risk of unmeaning, a risk which is starkly embodied in all writing. The distinction between philosophy and literature therefore becomes of secondary importance.

(Derrida insistently warns that if we say that dissemination is 'this' or 'that', we are trying to reserve its meaning. And this means that we are immobilizing it and stopping its own dissemination.) Rather, there is a dispersal of meaning because every word, every concept, every text can be connected through all sorts of connotations with other words, concepts, and texts.
