Alejandro's DUNE would star Brontis Jodorowsky, his own 12 year old son, alongside Orson Welles, Mick Jagger, David Carradine and even Salvador Dali. The team of assembled visual artists were some of the most provocative talents of the era, including H.R. Giger, Chris Foss, and Jean 'Moebius' Giraud.

Jodorowsky's Dune Didn't Get Made for a Reason... and We ...

According to the documentary Jodorowsky's Dune, there are only two known copies of the bound and published storyboard remaining: one belonging to Alejandro Jodorowsky himself, and the other in the presumed care of Jean Giraud's family. These persons are presumably also the ones who own the copy rights on the material, but I couldn't say for sure, given the labyrinthine nature of cinematic intellectual properties.

Dune (novel) - Wikipedia

Matt Brown of Screen Anarchy wrote that "it's easier to wall off a certain type of criminality behind the buffer of time—sure, Alejandro Jodorowsky is on the record in his book on the making of the film as having raped Mara Lorenzo while making El Topo—though he later denied it—but nowadays he's just that hilarious old kook from Jodorowsky's Dune!"

Alejandro Jodorowsky - Unseen Dune - Behind The Scenes

Early in Jodorowsky's Dune, director and ardent Jodorowsky fan Nicolas Winding Refn speaks of visiting Jodorowsky in his home and being taken aback when the director asked him, "Would you like to see Dune?" Enticed, Refn sat down with his idol, who then opened one of the production books originally used to pitch the project to studios, and proceeded to narrate the entire feature in captivating detail.
