Our ED staff recognized that our current trauma flow sheet was difficult to use. One problem was that the recorder had to jump from one area of the form to another to enter information. Documenting was a frustrating process, with the members of the trauma team calling out appropriate information but the recorder unable to keep up. As frustration levels rose, the emergency department formed a ...

Emergency Medical Services At the Crossroads]

- Cities and regions are often served by multiple 9-1-1 call centers.
- Emergency Medical Services (EMS) agencies do not effectively coordinate EMS services with EDs and trauma centers. As a result, the regional flow of patients is poorly managed, leaving some EDs empty and others overcrowded.
