Let's fall in the mud, flowers in the blood
It's a place from down below, it's a face that never shows
It's the kind you won't believe, just follow me
Won't you listen to the voice inside your head?
It's a voice that wants you dead
It will eat all that you give, if you live

Flowers In The Blood | Gay Courter

Let's fall in the mud, flowers in the blood.
There's a chance you shouldn't take
There's a voice you shouldn't wake
Better listen now to me, don't disagree.
You should worry 'bout the voice inside your head
About the things you heard it said,
Round and round it plays its game, all the same.
Don't you want to know ways you shouldn't go?

Flowers in the Blood by Gay Courter review

Here, Courter (Code Ezra, 1986, etc.) writes of a Jewish heiress to an opium empire who braces scandal to become a formidable defender of her own and her family's vital interests. Dinah Sassoon was never a delicate beauty like her mother, Luna, and the gossips whisper that it's just as well. Too tall, too intelligent, and far too pushy to suit 19th-century Calcutta's intimate Jewish community ...
