Government involvement in the economy increased most significantly during the New Deal of the 1930s. The 1929 stock market crash had initiated the most serious economic dislocation in the nation's history, the Great Depression (1929-1940). President Franklin D. Roosevelt (1933-1945) launched the New Deal to alleviate the emergency.

History, Government & Economics

For many years following the Great Depression of the 1930s, recessions—periods of slow economic growth and high unemployment often defined as two consecutive quarters of decline in the gross domestic product, or GDP—were viewed as the greatest of economic threats. When the danger of recession appeared most serious, the government sought to strengthen the economy by spending heavily itself ...
