A useful distinction in grammar is that of form and function. Grammatical form is concerned with the description of linguistic units in terms of what they are, and grammatical function is concerned with the description of what these linguistic units do. Note that we use capital letters at the beginning of function labels.

- In order to understand clauses, it is necessary to distinguish between grammatical function and grammatical form. The basic idea is this: the five types of clause constituent — subjects, verbs, complements and adverbials — are functionally defined. A subject, for example, is a subject because of the role it plays in a clause — because of how it functions in other words.

Form and function | Englicious.org

"The five elements of clause structure, namely subject, verb, object, complement, and adverbial, are grammatical functions. In addition, we distinguish predicator as the function carried by the main verb in a clause, and predicate as the function assigned to the portion of a clause excluding the subject.
