Porth Neigwl, known to locals as "Hell's Mouth" is a south-west-facing, rural beach on the southern side of North Wales' Llyn Peninsula. The "Hell's Mouth" label either derives from the physical relief of the bay, which can look like an open mouth, or the fact that this area is thought to have been the scene of as many as 30 shipwrecks over the last 180 years.

Hells Mouth

Hellmouth, or the jaws of Hell, is the entrance to Hell envisaged as the gaping mouth of a huge monster, an image which first appears in Anglo-Saxon art, and then spread all over Europe. It remained very common in depictions of the Last Judgment and Harrowing of Hell until the end of the Middle Ages , and is still sometimes used during the Renaissance and after.
