How to start emails | Common Mistakes in Business English

I use "Hope this finds you well", a lot when addressing clients I haven't spoken to in a while. I don't expect an answer, unless maybe something big has happened like a baby, engagement, house, etc. I would read the OPs example as the same, and not answer the question directly. Seems too formal for someone who really wants to know what you're up to!

Hope This Email Finds You Well? - ENGLISH FORUMS

To me, "I hope this email finds you" is awkward phrasing. It is a good idea to vary your beginning sentence if you write to someone often. A repeated opening sentence could come across as a habit rather than a sincere sentiment. I would enjoy your additions to the list above, along with your thoughts about polite opening sentences.
