Kook: What Surfing Taught Me About Love, Life, and Catching the Perfect Wave, by Peter Heller. In the summer of 2007, Peter Heller, an award winning adventure writer who lives in Denver, decided to drop everything, pick up a surfboard, and see if, at age 46, he could learn to surf a big hollow wave in six months.

Kook: What Surfing Taught Me About Love, Life, and ...

Kook means "beginner surfer." It is not a neutral term: it carries a slug of derision, a brand for the clueless, for those without hope, without grace, without rhythm. To be a kook is to be consigned to a kind of beginner's hell. The seal disappeared in a swirl of green water. Good.

"Most sports, at first entry, balance the initial strangeness and difficulty with some immediate rewards," Heller writes in "Kook: What Surfing Taught Me About Love, Life, and Catching the Perfect Wave." "Surfing is one of the only pursuits on earth that can drub you into numb exhaustion and blunt trauma time and again and give you nothing in return; nothing but sand in your crotch, salt-stung eyes, banded temple, chipped tooth, screaming back, and sunburned ears."
