Pioneer VSX-21TXH. The Pioneer VSX-21txh is a great receiver with more features than most people will ever need and if you get it at a good price all the more so. It puts out plenty of power 110watts RMS per each of its 7 channels. Also this number is most probably pretty spot on due to the fact that it is also THX certified.

I have a Pioneer VSX-21TXH that I bought used from Assimilated. It's nice but basically does the same thing you describe. Sometimes I simply can't get any output to the TV via HDMI regardless of how much I turn the thing on and off or try to switch inputs. Sometimes one input will work and another one won't. It's quite intermittent.
