The main point in this chapter is that all professional writing is done for specific readers in specific situations, to communicate information that readers will use. The writer's primary purpose is not to express personal feelings or opinions—or simply to transmit factual information; instead, the writer's purpose is to shape that information for the particular uses of a specific audience.

What is Technical Communications? At its most basic, communication is the transmission of information in the form of words, images, and sounds. We string words, images, and sounds together to make meaning and to share that meaning with others. How we form the “strings” depends on audience and context.
