REFLECTION AND REFRACTION W hen you shine a beam of light on a mirror, the light doesn't travel through the mirror, but is returned by the mirror's surface back into the air. When sound waves strike a canyon wall, they bounce back to you as an echo. When a wave transmitted along a spring reaches a wall, it reverses direc-tion.

Knowing the difference between reflection and refraction will help you understand basic phenomenon of science. Reflection, is when the light goes back to the previous medium, but changes direction. On the flip side, refraction is when light is absorbed by the medium but the direction and speed is affected.

Reflection and Refraction . Our study of geometrical optics will center on the application of two basic laws: one for reflection and one for refraction. Reflection is just as you might imagine: rays of light that are deflected by a surface (perhaps being sent back toward their source) are reflected. If you've ever looked in a mirror, you've ...

In physics, refraction is the change in direction of a wave passing from one medium to another or from a gradual change in the medium. Refraction of light is the most commonly observed phenomenon, but other waves such as sound waves and water waves also experience refraction. How much a wave is refracted is determined by the change in wave speed and the initial direction of wave propagation ...

The Laws of Reflection and Refraction | UniversalClass

Reflection and refraction. Light rays change direction when they reflect off a surface, move from one transparent medium into another, or travel through a medium whose composition is continuously changing. The law of reflection states that, on reflection from a smooth surface, the angle of the reflected ray is equal to the angle of the incident ray.
