The Field-Tenor-Mode. The Field-Tenor-Mode approach to text analysis and, ultimately, to text production is straightforward and effective: Field (what) is the subject matter of the text; Tenor (who) is the relationship between those involved in the communicative act, e.g. writer and reader, speaker and listener

Context and Register | EFL func

In examining how context affects language use, linguists refer to the context-specific variety of language as a register. The three aspects of the context are known as field, tenor and mode. Field refers to the subject matter or content being discussed. Mode refers to the channel (such as writing, or video-conference) of the communication.

Register Theory Tenor And Field

These three values – field, mode and tenor – are thus the determining factors for the linguistic features of the text. "The register is the set of meanings, the configuration of semantic patterns, that are typically drawn upon under the specified conditions, along with the words and structures that are used in the realization of these meanings."

The 'Field Tenor Mode' framework for analysis

Field, tenor and mode are called register variables and a description of the values for each of these variables at a given time of language use is a register description of a text. Field of discourse is defined as "the total event, in which the text is functioning, together with the purposive activity of the speaker or writer; it thus includes the subject-matter as one element in it".

The Notion of Register in SFL Theory: FIELD, MODE, and TENOR

3 SFL deals with register in terms of three variables or parameters known as semiotic functions. These are Field, Tenor and Mode 3 (Halliday 1978). Field is the area of external reality with which the text deals. Tenor concerns the relationships between those taking part in the linguistic act.

Field-Tenor-Mode textual analysis in EAL teaching

Field, tenor and mode are components of linguistics. Every text, regardless of subject, can be viewed from the field-tenor-mode framework. To put it simply, field is the subject matter of the text; tenor is the relationship between the author and the audience; and mode is how the text is constructed, particularly whether it is written-like or spoken-like. I think tenor is something that schools do not do well.
