Yorkshire Canaries | Beauty of Birds

The Yorkshire canary was raised in Bradford, hence its name. It is a canary of position, the result of the cross between the Lancashire canary with the bossu obtaining a thin, long and small-headed bird. To improve this breed it crossed with the Norwich and obtained canaries with the upright position and the body more filled.

Penangkaran - Kenari Yorkshire

An ADULT canary is one that has undergone its first full moult, moulting out all its feathers, including its wing flight and tail flight feathers. The initial moult which canaries undergo, (which generally occurs between two and four months after they have left the nest), is their juvenile moult, which enables them to shed their nest feathers, excluding their tail and wing flight feathers.
