SPQR - Wikipedia

SPQR (the title stands for "The Senate and People of Rome") covers the period from 753 BCE, the supposed date of the founding of Rome, to 212 CE, when the emperor Caracalla granted Roman citizenship to all free inhabitants of the empire. In a fascinating section early in the book, Beard discusses various legends about the founding of Rome, including the stories of Aeneas and Romulus and Remus, and says they are just that—legends, with no historical truth to them.

SPQR: A History of Ancient Rome by Mary Beard

Mary Beard's "SPQR" is an excellent, readable and engaging history of the Roman world from its beginnings through the times of the second emperor of the Severan dynasty, Caracalla, in 212 CE. The style is popular and non-academic, yet fraught with novel facts and ideas.
