"Tapping the Dream Tree" is a weighty collection of Newford stories by Charles De Lint, revisiting some of his favorite characters such as Jilly, Sophie and the Crow Girls. It does include a novelette --'Seven Wild Sisters'.

Tapping the Dream Tree book by Charles de Lint

Tapping the Dream Tree, the fourth short story collection set in Newford, adds even more layers to an already rich and varied setting. Familiar faces return, deepening our kinship with Newford's magic-rich inhabitants and its free-spirited artistic community, and new characters add ever more diversity to a city we'd love to visit but can never find.

As much as I enjoy the full length novels in Charles de Lint's Newford series, I have to say that I think I enjoy his short story anthologies even more. This one, Tapping the Dream Tree, had a wide range of stories. From the fairly light-hearted Pixel Pixies, Big City Littles and Trading Hearts at the Half Kaffe Cafe to the darker (and freakier)

AUTHOR: Tapping the Dream Tree (Tor Books, hardcover, November 2002) is my 50th book and collects a new batch of Newford stories written after those that appeared in Moonlight and Vines. As in the previous three Newford collections (which also include Dreams Underfoot and The Ivory and the Horn), you'll meet old friends and hopefully make some new ones.

Charles de Lint: Tapping the Dream Tree (2002) Description

At the heart of his work is the ongoing Newford series, of which this is the latest volume. The city of Newford could be any contemporary North American city . . . except that magic lurks in its music, in its art, in the shadows of its grittiest streets, where mythic beings walk disguised.
