Suns in alchemy - Wikipedia

One of the most striking depictions of the alchemical black sun is to be found on the second plate of the third sequence of illuminating paintings known as the Splendor Solis (c. 1532-1535). Here, the black sun is portrayed as a black orb from which an infinite crown of golden-orange rays emanate. It ascends over an irradiated town nested amidst a bountiful countryside that is itself divided into three dunes.
