The Captive (Captive Hearts, #1) by Grace Burrowes

In the Captive, arguably the most powerful book Grace Burrowes has written to date, the heroine stole my heart. As much as I dislike the label of "strong heroine," which is overused in reviews and, as such has been nearly stripped of its meaning, I'm at a loss for a better description.

Directed by Paul Almond. With Fat Morita, Chris Makepeace, Mari Sato, Michael Sarrazin. December 1944. As their bomber is shot down during a mission over Japan, Sergeant McManus and Robert, a young lieutenant, have no other choice but make a parachute jump. They are captured by local villagers and are saved from execution by Fukushima, the village elder.

The Captive Hearts 1 Grace

Grace Burrowes is at the top of her game in The Captive, the story of two traumatized souls helping one another heal. Christian Severn, Duke of Mercia, was held captive and tortured by Napoleon's army, while Gillian, Lady Greendale, has endured eight years of marriage to an elderly, abusive husband, now I chose this book, and the entire Captive Hearts trilogy as one of the Best of 2014 at Romantic Historical Reviews .

This is the second book in the Captive Hearts series by Grace Burrowes, a consummate writer who creates complex, poignant, and often extremely emotional stories. This is a darker series than her debut Windham family series, more like the Lonely Lords series but yet even darker than that as well.

The Traitor (Captive Hearts, #2) by Grace Burrowes

4 1/2 Stars The Laird is the third book in the Captive Hearts series, and what a great book to finish this trilogy! Michael and Brenna's story is disconnected from the other two except for the backdrop of the Napoleonic War. It is also a different "second chance" at love story than the others as well.
