REVIEW: 'The Hamlet Fire: A Tragic Story of Cheap Food ... Simon (History/Temple Univ.; Everything but the Coffee: Learning about America from Starbucks, 2009, etc.) uses the forgotten flashpoint of the Imperial Food Products fire in Hamlet, North Carolina, in which 25 people died, to synthesize an unsettling argument about an insidious "social gospel of cheap" that has overtaken American life since the economic jolts of the 1970s.

Government, and Cheap Lives is marked at times by understated acrimony and, at others, by unbearable poignancy. Perhaps, more than anything, it is revelatory in a way much needed in studies of the characteristics that typify southern agribusiness—particularly food processing.

The Hamlet Fire: A Tragic Story of Cheap Food, Cheap ...

Bryant Simon uses the tragedy of a fire at a Hamlet, NC chicken factory in 1991 that killed a number of workers due to unsafe working conditions to discuss issues that still exist today. The pursuit of cheap food, profit, deregulation, lax oversight, and the view that certain people are disposable all led to this tragedy, and continue to persist over 25 years later.

The Hamlet chicken processing plant
fire was an industrial fire in Hamlet,
North Carolina, at the Imperial Foods
processing plant on September 3, 1991, resulting from a failure in a hydraulic line. 25 workers were killed and 55 injured in the fire, trapped behind locked fire doors. In 11 years of operation, the plant had never received a safety inspection.
