At a time when children who don't speak formal English are written off in our schools, and when the class- and race-biased language used to describe those children determines their fate, The Skin That We Speak offers a cutting-edge look at this all-important aspect of education.

The Harvard Educational Review - HEPG Delpit states that our skin is the appearance of our contact with the rest of the world: "a means to negotiate our interactions . . . how we perceive our surroundings and [how others] perceive us" (p. xvii). The appearance and the looks we possess create expectations as to whether we are clever or not.
