The Spectator (1711) - Wikipedia

The Spectator. Footnote 1: In 1695, when a student at Oxford, aged 23, Joseph Addison had dedicated 'to the Right Honourable Sir George Somers, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal,' a poem written in honour of King William III after his capture of Namur in sight of the whole French Army under Villeroi. This was Addison's first bid for success in ...

Starmer's prosecution campaign is misguided | The Spectator
Desperate for that silver bullet which will drop some politicians' republic into their laps, Australia's official republicans rushed to capitalise on Soap Oprah, as the Daily Telegraph headlined what threatens to be serialised into 'Les pensées sublimes de la duchesse souffrante'.. Much of what was claimed is fiction.

The words pouring on Meghan's head are written for a witch, because that is the natural progress of the story. The royal family are Britain's national myth and sacrifice: our small flesh gods, without whom we would have to have a serious political system requiring serious engagement, instead of which we have this.

Soap Oprah froths up republicans | The Spectator Australia
A glimpse of normality returned to PMQs today. For once the pandemic didn't dominate. And Sir Keir tried a new tactic. He hammered Boris on a single issue. Nurse's pay. Finally he's realised ...

The Spectator Club By Sir

The Spectator was a daily publication founded by Joseph Addison and Richard Steele in England, lasting from 1711 to 1712. Each "paper", or "number", was approximately 2,500 words long, and the original run consisted of 555 numbers, beginning on 1 March 1711. These were collected into seven volumes.
