Dr. Gideon Fell #6: The Three Coffins | profmorbis

This is The Three Coffins, to quote the inexcusable American retitling of the British edition The Hollow Man, which perfectly suggests the macabre menace of the story. That man must indeed have been hollow who, watched of course by a responsible and innocent witness, was seen to enter a room without other access in which, later, there is found the corpse of the room's occupant, but of course no hollow man.

Gideon Fell - Wikipedia

In The Three Coffins (a.k.a., The Hollow Man), Dr. Fell interrupts the narrative of the novel to lecture to Inspector David Hadley, Ted Rampole (we knew him as "Tad" Rampole in Hag's Nook), and "fussy baldheaded little" Pettis. This Locked Room Lecture (chapter 17) is one of the most famous chapters written in detective, crime, and murder mystery fiction, and has been anthologized widely.
