closely at Lara Foot Newton's play Tshepang: The Third Testament as a tool of exploring the issues of shame, as her work seems to be a response to the media representation as much as to the event itself. I am interested in what possibilities are created when rapists are stigmatized as barbaric and monstrous non-humans.

Luthando Mngomezulu - Tshepang (Magical Realism)

Tshepang was written by Lara Foot Newton and was first performed in South Africa in 2003. Tshepang is based on the true story of a nine month baby that is brutally raped in Louisvaleweg, which is a small town in the Northern Cape. I enjoyed this play and was fascinated by the how the director used symbolism to portray many aspects of the play.
