32 Things You Always Believed That Simply Aren't True

As humans, we tend to assume that we can see, feel and experience everything there is to be perceived in life. Since birth, we're conditioned to believe that we're a superior, infallible race of beings that can control everything — even if we suspect deep down that we can't. But I've always felt that there is much more to existence.

We cannot choose what we believe - General Discussion ...

What I Believe But Cannot Prove. Our knowledge of nature remains provisional because we can never know if we have final Truth. Because science is a human activity and nature is complex and dynamic, fuzzy logic and fractional probabilities best describe both nature and our approximate understanding of it.

Confirmation Bias. Once we have a belief, we tend to cling to it, even when it's untrue. The confirmation bias is the tendency to seek out information that supports what we already believe. We do this in two important ways. First, we tend to surround ourselves with messages that confirm our pre-existing opinions.

Is It Logical To Believe In Something We Can't See

We cannot choose what we believe but we can make false claims about our beliefs. I can claim to be a Christian. I can do what many people do, walk into a church once, say the sinner's prayer, announce to the people in the church that I believe in God, and then walk out the door to carry on my life as if there was no God.
